See his Profile - He responded on 8 JUL 2010 to my email of 6 JUL 2010 saying he had never encountered the name Upchurch (and apparently did not want to be informed). He referred me to Alice Bradley of the Gen. Soc. of Old Tryon County / Rutherford Co., NC. Her phone (828) 247-8700. Robin does have a distinguished history pedigree.

III. Since John Kim U had indicated he planned to visit Rutherford Co., NC in 2010, I emailed him on 24 JUL 2010 about results. I responded that he did not go. I have copied him on Rutherford Co., NC / Joseph U b 1775 since

Hi Alice---

It was great to talk to you today about the Upchurch records in Rutherford Co., NC. For the benefit of cousins copied I will explain that we Upchurch researchers have long been interested in Upchurch records in Rutherford going back to 1800 at least. Thus, when Cousin Beth recently told me that Robin S. Lattimore is an expert on Rutherford records I contacted him and while cordial he indicated he had no knowledge of Upchurch records in the County.

He referred me to you as a volunteer in the Library in said County. I understand you are also President of the local Genealogy Society. You indicated that the Library does have a vertical file on families but the Upchurch slot is empty. I will send materials as indicated below.

The Upchurches in Rutherford seem to be of two groups. One would be members of the Sherwood Upchurch Clan the outlines of which are known but need much attention. The second group is headed by Joseph Upchurch born about 1775. We have about 2,000 of his descendants organized but have long sought with no success the name of his father. Joseph appears on the 1800 Census in Rutherford. His descendants were centered in TN soon thereafter.

You mentioned that the Library has the 1994 book "Descendants of Logan Porter and Quintine Upchurch" by Laurie Rhoads Hensley. I have that book as well and can report that Quintine is of the Sherwood Upchurch Clan. If Laurie is still active/interested I would very much like her contact information.

I provide the above comments in part as you indicated you would place a notice about our interest and willingness to cooperate on Upchurch and related records. I am in my 31st year of publishing the Upchurch Bulletin details on which may be seen on my website www.upchurchstory.com. I can be reached via email or by phone at (636) 530-6022

I am sending via surface mail to day a copy of Upchurch Bulletin Vol 4 No 3 July 1983 which contains details about Upchurch records in Rutherford. Also being sent are flyer's on the Upchurch publications. I would appreciate it if you would put these in the vertical file along with any other information you think appropriate.

Please provide me with your contact information which I will place in the next Upchurch Bulletin.

With deep appreciation and All Best Wishes!

Phil Upchurch

Introduction

BOUNDARIES

LINCOLN COUNTY was formed from Tryon; Tryon, from Mecklenburg; Mecklenburg, from Anson; Anson, from Bladen; Bladen, from New Hanover precinct of Bath. As each of these counties was successively formed it was allotted all the territory settled and unsettled to the westward, the western boundary of the new county being the western boundary of the Colony or State. The Charter of Charles II fixed the westward boundary "as far as the South-Seas." This boundary was affirmed in the Bill of Rights in 1776. Hence Bladen and its western successors until 1777 extended to the "South-Seas."

In 1749 Bladen was divided by a line equidistant from Saxapahaw and Great Pee Dee rivers—the western part to be Anson County. Anson then included the whole of the western part of North Carolina from the Virginia line to the South Carolina line and evidently west to the Pacific. But in 1753 Rowan County was cut off from Anson, taking with it all the territory north of Earl Granville's line, which had been fixed as latitude 35° 34'.

In 1762 Mecklenburg was cut off from Anson, its eastern boundary being a line "beginning at Lord Carteret's (Earl Granville's) line six miles northeast from Capt Charles Hart's plantation on Buffalo Creek, and to run from thence to the mouth of Clear Creek which empties itself into Rocky River, below Capt Adam Alexander's, and from thence due south, to the bounds of the province of South Carolina." Mecklenburg's northern boundary was evidently Earl Granville's line; its southern boundary, the South Carolina line; and its western boundary, the Pacific Ocean.

In 1768, effective 10th April 1769, Tryon County was cut off from Mecklenburg. Tryon's eastern boundary was a line "beginning at Earl Granville's line where it crosses the Catawba River, and the said river to be the line to the South Carolina line." The northern boundary was Earl Granville's line. The southern boundary was the South Carolina line. The western boundary was indefinitely westward, the Pacific Ocean. In 1777 this western boundary was however definitely fixed by the formation of Washington County, comprising all the territory west of the mountains, and the western boundary of Tryon became approximately what is now the boundary line between North Carolina and Tennessee.

In 1779 Lincoln County was formed. Tryon was cut by a line "beginning at the south line near Broad River on the dividing ridge between Buffalo Creek and Little Broad River, thence along the said ridge to the line of Burke County." All of Tryon to the west of this line became Rutherford County; all to the east became Lincoln. The western boundary of Lincoln then ran thru the middle of what is now Cleveland County. The northern boundary was Earl Granville's line. The southern boundary was the South Carolina line. The eastern boundary was the Catawba River.

In 1782 the size of Lincoln was increased by addition of a part of Burke County. The northern line of Lincoln was to run as follows: "Beginning at Sharrol's ford, running with the road leading towards Henry Whitner's as far

This line was amended in 1784 so that "the boundary line between the counties of Burke and Lincoln shall hereafter be as follows, to wit, beginning at the Horse-Ford on Catawba river, running thence to John Hawn's on Hendry river, thence to William Orr's on Jacob's river, and thence to the intersection of the counties of Burke, Lincoln, and Rutherford." These two enactments were somehow interpreted as extending the county northward to the Catawba River, and the county is so shown on maps dated about 1820. Thus from 1784 until the formation of Cleveland in 1841 the county included all of what is now Lincoln, Catawba, and Gaston, and a large part of what is now Cleveland. This is an area about 56 miles long and about 33 miles wide.

In 1841 Cleveland County was cut off from Lincoln and Rutherford. The part of the line that affected Lincoln was to run with the dividing line of Burke and Rutherford to the Lincoln line, thence to the 13 mile post on the Lucas Ford Road, thence to the 12 mile post on the New Post Road from Rutherford to Lincoln, thence to the 12 mile post on the road from Lincoln to Quinn's Ferry, thence to the 12 mile post on the road from Morganton to Yorkville, S. C., thence with the road passing Abernathy's store by the Gold Mine at King's Mountain to the South Carolina line.

In 1842 Catawba County was cut off from Lincoln. All that portion of Lincoln north of an east and west line running 1½ miles north of Lincoln was taken away. A part of this territory was returned to Lincoln when Gaston was formed four years later.

In 1846 Gaston County was cut off. All that portion of Lincoln which lay south of an east and west line running 6 miles south of the dividing line between Lincoln and Catawba (that is 4½ miles south of Lincoln) was taken away. At the same time the dividing line between Lincoln and Catawba was moved 4 miles north, to a line 5½ miles north of Lincoln. This should have left the county 10 miles long from north to south.

When these changes were made in the boundaries, commissioners were appointed to mark the new lines. This fact may account for certain divergences from the statutory boundaries.

POPULATION

The population of the county from 1769 to 1870 was as follows:

1769	8500	(estimate based on number of Taxables which was 1221)
1770	11000	(estimate based on number of Taxables which was 1614)
