New tax break helps this old house

Times-News

From the moment they first saw it, Tony and Michele Upchurch fell in love with what they would later call home.

After the couple moved to Burlington in January 1996 because of a new job, they lived in an apartment while they house shopped. One day they saw a 1920s house in a historic district on Fountain Place.

"Once a week we would ride through this neighborhood, and this is the house we would always look at," Tony Upchurch said as he stood on the front lawn of the tan-painted and white-column house with his 3-year-old son, Chandler. "This was our favorite house in all of the Burlington neighborhoods we had driven through."

So when they heard through friends it was up for sale later that year, they quickly snatched it up and moved in last October. The house was in pretty good shape, but they stripped away lead-based paint, repainted a lot of the inside and did other remodeling to make it their own.

"I've worked on the house every day since we moved in," said Tony Upchurch, a 28-year-old computer-network administrator in Greensboro.

"There's not a day that goes by I haven't done something to improve it."

With a baby on the way, they have more remodeling plans.

And a new state income-tax credit for homeowners means more money in their pockets.

The General Assembly agreed this year to give homeowners a 30 percent tax credit if they spend more than $25,000 within a 24-month period restoring historic structures.

Lawmakers also raised from 5 percent to 20 percent the tax break people get for rehabilitating structures that produce income, primarily businesses. Owners already enjoy a federal tax credit of 20 percent for historic income-producing buildings.

The changes take effect Jan. 1 and include only buildings or districts listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

That's good news for the Upchurches, who anticipate spending at least $25,000 on their 2,400-square-foot home at 418 Fountain Place. They want to redo the kitchen, another bathroom and transform the patio to a sun room and the attic into a playroom.

The Upchurch's home is in the city's largest and one of only three districts listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The others are Lakeside and in the downtown. Fourteen other structures are individually listed.

Experts predicted that the new tax credits will result in a preservation boom.

"It will interest a lot more people in saving historic structures and make it financially viable for them to live in older structures," said Wes Armstrong, a city planner. "It will prevent the loss of historic structures throughout town. And citizens likely will propose more historic districts."

The credits should speed up renovation of the 95-acre Glencoe cotton mill and village, one of the country's remaining mill villages, north of Burlington.

"We think this is the greatest thing that has happened to Glencoe," said Helen Walton, chairwoman of the Burlington Historic Preservation Commission, which oversees outside renovations to the west Burlington historic district that includes Fountain Place.

A Raleigh-based nonprofit group called Preservation North Carolina bought the largely abandoned 1880s village this year. The group wants to restore it and sell individual lots to people interested in restoring the turn-of-the-century homes. About 25 village houses are intact.

Kirk Carrison, who manages the Winston-Salem office of Preservation North Carolina, said he expects to begin selling lots next summer.

"These homes are going to need three to four times (the spending minimum of $25,000) in rehabilitation," he said. "For instance, if you are going to put $80,000 into

The state and federal tax credits apply only to properties listed in the National Register of Historic Places, either individually or as a contributing building in a National Register historic district. Property owners are advised to consult with the State Historic Preservation Office before beginning any work. To qualify for the tax credits, all rehabilitation work must meet the U.S. Secretary of the Interior standards. Summarized, they are:

- A property shall be used as it was historically or be given a new use that requires minimal change to its distinctive materials, features, spaces and spatial relationships.
- The historic character of a property shall be retained and preserved.
- Each property shall be recognized as a physical record of its time, place and use. Changes that create a false sense of historic development shall not be undertaken.
- Changes to a property that have acquired historic significance in their own right shall be retained and preserved.
- Distinctive materials, features, finishes and construction techniques or examples of craftsmanship that characterize a property shall be preserved.

- Deteriorated historic features shall be repaired rather than replaced.
- Chemical or physical treatments, if appropriate, shall be undertaken using the gentlest means possible.
- Archaeological resources shall be protected and preserved in place.
- New additions, exterior alterations or related new construction shall not destroy the historic materials, features and spatial relationships that characterize the property.
- New additions and adjacent or related new construction shall be undertaken in such a manner that, if removed in the future, the essential form and integrity of the historic property and its environment would be unimpaired.

it, you could get $24,000 of that back over several years in tax credits. That's a lot."

He said it's hard to say how much the lots will cost, but it may be about $30,000 each after they are tapped into municipal water and sewer.

In Burlington, plans are under way to rezone the East Davis Street from office and institutional to residential. Many neighbors have asked for the change to help preserve their neighborhood. And some are interested in having it designated a historic district.

Meanwhile, the Upchurches said they would have done the work even without the tax credits. Tony Upchurch said the sweat he's put into it so far is worthwhile.

"If I had a choice between a new house and this house, I'd have this one," he said. "I love this house."

Here is an offer I make to new cooperators. If they send me "40." I will go through the 100 issues of the UB and pick out 8 issues that I think would be of special interest to them. This seems to work well although some end up wanting to buy all 100 issues.

I would be happy to see the Brannums Book and can return it if you so desire.

I am impressed by your willingness to help and look forward to working with you - as for example in improving the enclosed Market Outline. This deals with the key dates, names, places but over time we can get into other interesting aspects such as the uniqueness of certain individuals, special events, etc. Such aspects make family especially interesting. For example, Carol told me Sgt York died in Korea army. Did you know that?

Trust this finds you well.

Sincerely yours
