Bustling Old Hotel Gone Except for the Water

JACKSON SPRINGS — They used to come by the train-load, four trains a day in the summer, to walk the wooded trails, dance to the orchestra that played each evening and, most of all, drink the water.

Now it's gone. The hotel is a small pile of rubble, fertilizer is stored in the depot, the wooded trails have disappeared, the orchestra plays only in the memory of the old timers and even the train tracks have faded into the sandy soil of Moore County.

Only the water remains, a mineral-flavored taste of what life used to be like in those golden days of chiffon dresses and moonlight waltzes.

And Nancy Blue remembers.

"Jackson Springs was built as a health spa," she said the other day as we stood in the shiny new post office where she is postmaster. "The water here has a high magnesium content and back in the days of natural remedies it was thought to be good for you. The water here even won second prize at the Chicago Worlds Fair.

"They shipped water out of here in green glass jars, sending it all over the country. Four trains a day used to back in here all the way from West End.

"They would bring in people to stay at the hotel or in the 50 to 75 summer cottages that used to be here or in one of the boarding houses.

"On the way out they would take peaches and water.

"The hotel was actually The Jackson Springs Hotel, but we all called it just 'The Hotel.' There was a bowling alley, a swimming pool, a boarding school, a hardware store and a dry goods store. None of that is here now.

"The hotel ran from the turn of the century and I guess it was the advent of the automobile that really ended things here. People could go to other places then, and when the hotel burned in 1934 that was pretty much the end of Jackson Springs."

It is now a quiet village in an oddly hilly section of Moore County just four miles down N.C. 73 from West End and a scant 10 miles from the bustle of Southern Pines and Pinehurst.

The spring down at the bottom of the hill puts out the oddly flavored water. And the people s

"There are people who still come down here to bring and fill up five-gallon jugs," Mrs. Blue said. "My father had several heart attacks until he started drinking the water and now he says his cholesterol level is way down and he doesn't even have to take the medicine. He drinks nothing but Jackson Springs water.

"But you really can't use it for everything. It stains clothes and makes terrible black coffee.

"You know, this post office is the first nice business building built here in my life and I'm 53 years old.

"There's not much here anymore, but oh my, it used to be so beautiful. My father would take us to the pavilion where they had the dances, and I used to look at all those ladies in chiffon dresses. Those were beautiful summer nights."
