North Carolina Death Certificates 1906-1919

[Introduction written by Karen-Marie Allen, Head Librarian, Olivia Raney Library]

On 10 March 1913, the North Carolina General Assembly ratified an act requiring the registration of births and deaths in the state; virtually full compliance was achieved by 1920, with some delayed birth records for earlier dates eventually added.

The first microfilm in the North Carolina Death Index records deaths filed in the early years of collection. The county of death was recorded as a numeric code. Wake County is number 92 and when you view the image; you will see the county written in that way.

Records on this early index were organized by county and date of death. Here is an abstract of those records for Wake County from this first film. They have been arranged in alphabetical order. Please note that the names have not been included in the general index to this journal but it is quite easy to scan the pages for your family member.

Death certificates contain two types of information: information about the person and information about the death.

Information about the person may include: first name, last name, middle name, age, sex, race, date of birth, place of birth (state or country), marital status (including number of children), spouse's name, occupation, father's name and birth place, mother's name and birth place, and signature and address of person providing information about the deceased.

Information about the death may include: date of death, primary cause of death, contributing cause of death, duration of the primary and contributing causes of death, signature and address of the physician, former residence if death occurred away from home, place of death, place of burial, date of burial, signature and address of undertaker, date when the certificate was filed, and signature of the local registrar.

Not all of this information will be on every death certificate and forms were not always complete but these documents still provide a wealth of information to guide genealogists in the search for that elusive ancestor.
