Carlyle special youth

By MARY BETH NEWHART
Record staff writer

Flower arrangements take up every available space in Donna Davis' living room.

The sweet smell of the blooms fill the quiet air. There are no children at play today.

Last week, Mrs. Davis, her second husband, John; her family, daughter Susie and son Brian; and her first husband, Thomas E. Carlyle; began the long process of dealing with the death of a son and brother.

Matthew E. Carlyle, a spunky 8-year-old with a quick smile, a big heart and a love for basketball died Thursday, Feb. 16, at Duke Medical Center after a struggle with cancer.

Mrs. Davis calmly told the story of her son's illness. When Matt was 6, the doctors discovered that the boy had a brain tumor. The long process of surgery, radiation therapy and chemotherapy started in March 1987.

A year later, Matt developed pulmonary fibrosis (a disease that affects the lungs) from the chemotherapy. "The doctors said that was really rare," Mrs. Davis said. "There were only seven other children in the world that had developed pulmonary fibrosis from chemotherapy treatments."

The treatments in the end may have cured the tumor, but the side effects of the pulmonary fibrosis is what ended the young boy's life.

Always a happy-go-lucky child, Matt never let his illness stop him from going to school and playing sports.

An avid basketball player and a UNC Tarheel fan, Matt played Zebulon Parks and Recreation Youth League basketball for two seasons.

"My father had set up a basketball goal for him," Mrs. Davis remembered. "It started at 5-feet high, and the better Matt got, the higher his grandfather would have to move it up.

Matt Carlyle

"I was amazed he was athletically inclined," she continued. "He had to wear a helmet because of the surgery the second year he played. But he loved it even though he would get tired very fast."

Gold Leaf Publisher Mark Wilson was Matt's coach the second year.

"He just wanted to be like the rest of the kids," Wilson said. "He never let on that he was sick. If the game got rough, he would be right in there with them. He didn't want any special treatment."

Matt would get tired quickly, Wilson explained. "Sometimes he would get so tired that he couldn't tell me. He would just come out of the game and sit in my lap."

Wilson said that Matt was so proud that year when he got the championship trophy with the rest of the team. "He didn't get to play in the last few games," he said, "but he was an extraordinary kid."

Mrs. Davis agreed. "We knew that the least little thing could come along and kill him." Matt spent the spring of 1988 on oxygen. He was able to go off of it during the summer, but when fall rolled around, the need for the oxygen returned.

"This past fall he said to me, 'Mama, I guess I can't play this year. I was good, wasn't I?'" Mrs. Davis remembered.

According to his mother, Matt had a sense of humor that stayed with him until the end. "He would always laugh," she said. "And he was always nice and polite to people. This last time in the hospital, a man came in his room to empty the trash can and Matt thanked him."

Matt was set to get his wish from the Make A Wish Foundation, an organization that grants requests to terminally-ill children, earlier this week.

He was a professional wrestling fan, his mother said. His wish was to meet with "Andre the Giant," his favorite wrestler. Andre's contract specifically did not allow the wrestler to have contact with children because of his "bad" image. Matt's second choice was to meet with wrestler Hulk Hogan. That meeting was scheduled for this past Monday, 12 days after Matt was taken to the hospital for the last time.

When Matt entered Duke Medical Center the day before he died, officials at the Make A Wish Foundation had been able to set up another wish for him. UNC basketball player J.R. Reid had agreed to stop by Matt's room Friday morning. Reid never had the opportunity to meet him. Matt died Thursday morning.

"You could tell by the little things he said that he knew he was dying," Mrs. Davis said. "A few weeks before he died, he told his little brother Brian not to cry, not to be sad and to keep going to school. He knew."

Matt lapsed into a coma an hour before he died. "He went so quickly that I didn't have time to do anything but hold onto him and talk to him," Mrs. Davis said. "It was his time and he knew. He was brave the whole time."

In honor of Matthew Carlyle, the Zebulon Parks and Recreation Commission was set to vote to establish a spirit award in honor of him at its meeting Wednesday night.

"It was appropriate that it snowed the day of his funeral," his mother said. "He loved the snow."

20 Years Ago / From The Zebulon Record

Zebulon night club burns down for second time in three years

From the Zebulon Record
Thursday, January 16, 1975

The Chaparral Night Club on N.C. 97 burned to the ground for the second time in approximately three years.

Fire departments from Zebulon, Pilot and Bunn battled a blaze at the night club site located approximately three miles from Zebulon, but to no avail. The night club was destroyed, leaving damages estimated at between $40,000 and $45,000.

According to the Zebulon Fire Department, club owner Thurman Carlyle told fire fighters that evidence showed that someone had broken into the club and stolen the cash drawer before allegedly setting fire to the Chaparral. Carlyle said the cash drawer was missing from the rubble left by the blaze.

The arson squad from the Franklin County Sheriff's Department conducted an investigation at the site the next day.
