HALLIE RUTH COVINGTON

○ Harnett Co, NC Heritage Book 1993 - Pg 200-201 Article #189

HALLIE RUTH COVINGTON GREGORY JOHN WILLIAM WALLACE

189

My mother's mother, Hallie Ruth Covington Wallace Gregory, lived about half a mile from my school, and I often went to see her on my lunch hour. We had an hour for lunch then, and would either go home for lunch or eat what we had brought from home somewhere in the school building or on the grounds.

Sometimes I would eat the lunch I had brought from home while walking to Grandma's house. And sometimes she might say, "Can you come and eat with me next Tuesday?" I would look forward to it, and when the bell rang for lunch on the appointed day, I would hurry to Grandma's. She always had something I liked and some things Mama didn't cook often. She made some wonderful chicken stew. She had peach pickles, cookies, and always a layer cake or two. Her favorite cake was one with a sticky butterscotch icing — good but hard to eat without getting icing on my hands and face.

She had a "sun room" with windows on the south and west sides, in which she kept a lot of geraniums; and on the north wall there were shelves for books. There I became acquainted with the Scotland County poet John Charles McNeill. She had a volume of his poems, and she told me she was kin to him, though I never learned how close kin that was. Later I learned that his mother was a Livingston and Grandma's mother was a Livingston, so they were probably cousins.

In the fall or spring I liked to sit in the sun room and browse among her books. The sun was warm streaming through the windows while the wind was cold outside. She had a "flower pit" on the south side of the house in which she kept flowers during the winter.

I sometimes walked the mile and a half to her house from home on Sunday afternoons. On the way I had to pass Mr. Ed Gaskin's pasture, which, at times, kept his bull safely away from the path; at other times he might be anywhere. I can remember its coming to our house more than once and running around the house at night bellowing. We had cows that attracted him. My mother was afraid of him — as much as if he had been a grizzly bear.

One day on my return from Grandma's, I saw the bull in the path between me and home; I retreated to Grandma's house and went the long way home, about two miles farther.

Before I was out of high school, Grandma became sick and spent about all the time in bed. She said she had pernicious anemia. She was the first person I ever heard talk about dying. People generally accepted their illnesses and didn't talk about them, in my presence at least. But she said, "James Wallace, I won't be here long; this is going to take me away." Born in 1878, she died in 1939.

She was a religious woman and talked of going to heaven. I am sure she is there, probably with a group of children, telling them stories as she did for years in Sunday School.

Grandma's first husband and my mother's father, John William Wallace, was born in Magnolia, N.C. July 21, 1870, son of J. P. and Sarah Wallace. He was a Methodist circuit riding preacher. He died in 1903 at the age of thirty-two, and was buried in the cemetery at Cokesbury Methodist Church in northern Harnett County, where he was preaching at the time of his illness and death. He left no sons to carry on his name, but from him I got my given name. A son, Milton, died young. Two daughters married and lived near Buies Creek all their lives. The oldest, Sallie Mae, married Ezra Lee (Dick) Upchurch. Willie Norma married James Tyson Betts. Each of them raised four children.

When I knew my grandmother, she was married to John N. Gregory, who died in 1965 at the age of ninety-four.

Miss Kirks to begin studies at Juilliard School

Crystall Kirks, the daughter of former Apex resident Susan Kirks, has been chosen to begin study at the Juilliard School this fall.

Miss Kirks is one of 35 students accepted to pursue a bachelor of fine arts degree in the dance division. The curriculum also will include music, drama, languages, literature and critical analysis.

Miss Kirks is a 1988 graduate of the School of the Arts at McAteer High School in San Francisco. She was awarded a partial scholarship.

Her father is Chris Kirks of Raleigh. She is the granddaughter of Elizabeth and Henry Covington of Apex and Betty and Edward Kirks of Raleigh and the great-granddaughter of George Rogers of Apex.

Crystall Kirks

Founded in 1905 by the godson of composer Franz Liszt, the Juilliard School, located in Lincoln Center in New York City, offers training in music, dance and drama.
