

Kinion L JonesXID – 3076

Commentary: Kinion Jones was born about 1825 in North Carolina. He married Mackey Louisa (Louise) Upchurch, possibly his half-sister, sometime during the early 1840s. Mackey, who seemed to go a variation of her middle name, was the daughter of Nathan, head of Upchurch clan 3.

KENYON JONES DEAD

His Body Found in the Courthouse Yesterday

DIED OF GAS ASPHYXIA

The Dead Man Found While Searching for a Leak in Gas Fixtures—Has Been Court Crier for Six Years—Had a Room in Courthouse in Which He Slept—Evidently He Left Gas on by Accident

The dead body of Mr. Kenyon Jones, the well known Wake county court crier was found in a room on the first floor of the county court house in this city yesterday afternoon.

A fume of gas which accumulated rapidly in the halls and offices of the court house caused the investigation which led to the ghastly find and leaves no room for doubt that accidental asphyxiation by gas caused the death.

The body was found by Deputy Sheriff N. E. Riddick in a small room just across the hall from the sheriff's office. It is a room to which Mr. Jones always carried a key, keeping, as he did, a cot in the room on which he always slept when he spent the night in the city, both during and between the sessions of court. His home was near Cary.

The smell of gas had gotten so strong at the rear of the court house that close search was being made for a leakage in the gas pipes or jets, and after a vain search in nearly every other place from which it could come, Mr. Riddick thought himself of the fact that the aged crier, Mr. Jones, was in the city the night before and had gone to this room about 10:30 o'clock, when he and Deputy Parham left the sheriff's office for the night. He told "Lash" Roy, the cook at the jail, to look into Mr. Jones' room. He found the door locked and peeping through the keyhole, saw him on the cot. Mr. Riddick procured necessary implements and broke open the door, finding the old man on the cot cold in death. The body was in a position which the man would most naturally take in his sleep and there was no mark on the body which would indicate a violent death.

One jet of the gas burner was "turned on" and the room was dense with the deadly vapor. The doors and windows were thrown open and the place ventilated before any examination could be made or attention given the body at all.

Mr. M. G. Jones, a son of the dead man, was notified at once and later in the evening had the body removed to his residence, 232 Sanders street.

The most plausible theory as to the way in which the gas jet was left open is that Mr. Jones, who was decrepid and feeble, in reaching up to turn the light out, without realizing it turned the thumb screw back again allowing the gas to escape into the room.

The deceased has been serving as court crier for Sheriff Page for eight years, that is, during both of Mr. Page's terms of office. He also served as jailor under Sheriff Nowell more than ten years ago. He was twice married, the second wife surviving him; also one child by the second marriage and five by the first. Of these G. M. Jones is in the employ of the Southern Railroad Co., W. F. Jones is township constable at Cary and Mr. M. G. Jones is engineer at the Blind Institution. A daughter, Mrs. Hellen King, resides here and a son, Clayton Jones, lives in Norfolk.

The deceased is well known throughout the county, especially for the efficient service as court crier and the news of his death will be received with sincere regret by hundreds of friends.

The above supports RPU's outline of Kenyon's (Kinnion) family.
