Hi Bill---

Just now I am doing followup work on the talk I gave in Apex on 12 MAY 2009. It was a pleasure to see so many there but I was disappointed in not being able to chat privately with you and others. Also, there were many more stories to tell but not enough time to get them all in.

If there is any aspect of the talk or any local history or family history matter you would like to explore or share, please feel free to contact me. For more on what I am doing you can have a look at my website http://www.upchurchstory.com/. For more on my background you can google Robert Phillip Upchurch and click on the oral history taken in 1994.

When I got back home I checked my files and was pleased to note that you have an Upchurch heritage in that I show your Grandmother as Lillie W. Upchurch Barefoot. I have studied your part of the Upchurch Family quite a bit. If you are interested in any of the details and the aspects yet to be resolved please let me know.

I really enjoyed my visit in Apex and am grateful to Debbie Douglass as the key person in The Apex Historical Society for arrangements and to The Halle Cultural Center for their co-sponsorship.

Days of valor in World War II:

Apex veterans tell their stories

By SANDY BARNES
Herald Editor

Facing uncertain destinies, over 60 young men travelled from Apex to Europe and the Pacific to serve their country during World War II.

Going from the small, peaceful town surrounded by farms and tobacco fields, sons and husbands found themselves fighting Nazis and Japanese while struggling for survival in remote and hostile places.

Here are some of the stories of Apex veterans who carry memories of World War II etched in their minds and hearts.

From farming to fighting

△ Apex resident Lloyd Goolsby got a head start on military service by enlisting in the Army in July 1939 -- two years before the United States entered World War II. A young farmer whose tobacco crop wasn't doing so well, Goolsby said the army looked like a good place to be.

However, when 18-year-old Goolsby went to Ft. Bragg in Fayetteville, he found those who didn't think much of soldiers. People were not only opposed to the United States becoming involved in a foreign conflict, but also to the military in general, he said. Goolsby said he remembers a sign in the front yard of a Fayetteville home which said, "No dogs or soldiers allowed on the lawn."

Goolsby stayed at Ft. Bragg until the United States entered World War II after the Dec. 7, 1941 bombing of Pearl Harbor by Japanese forces. He was sent to Scotland, England and then to Africa where he served under General Patton as chief of a gun section.

From Africa, Goolsby left for Italy where he and his gun crew were attached to the 5th Army. After months of wearing big "13" insignias on their helmets, Goolsby said they changed to a "5A" identification.

None of the men in Goolsby's outfit was hurt until they were reassigned, he said. The day after he and his buddies began wearing the 5th Army insignia, two men were killed and Goolsby was wounded.

A shell from a German gun that Goolsby had tried to destroy the day before landed in the area where he and his men were. Because the ground was soft, the shell buried itself three feet into the ground. Its impact knocked Goolsby unconscious, giving him a concussion. He woke up the next day in a hospital near Cassino, Italy where he had been fighting.

Goolsby left Italy Dec. 19, 1944, arriving home on Christmas Eve. He said he was so excited about coming home that he gave the cab driver $5 to take him one block to his house. When Goolsby's 3-year-old daughter Dorothy saw him, she said, "This is my daddy!" He hadn't seen the child since she was a young baby.

Looking back on his war experience, Goolsby, now 73, says with an amiable smile he considers himself very fortunate to have survived.

Leaving in the face of death

When New Hill resident Wallace Womble went to fight in World War II, he said he didn't have much hope of coming back. Shortly before he left to go overseas, Womble and his family received word that both his brother and cousin had been killed in combat.

The two men died one day apart. Womble's cousin Sam K. Womble died in France Nov. 20, 1944. The very next day, Womble's older brother Miller was killed in England.

Womble went to fight in Germany in 1944. He said he was supposed to go to the Pacific after the war in Europe ended, but that the dropping of the atomic bomb ended the conflict there.

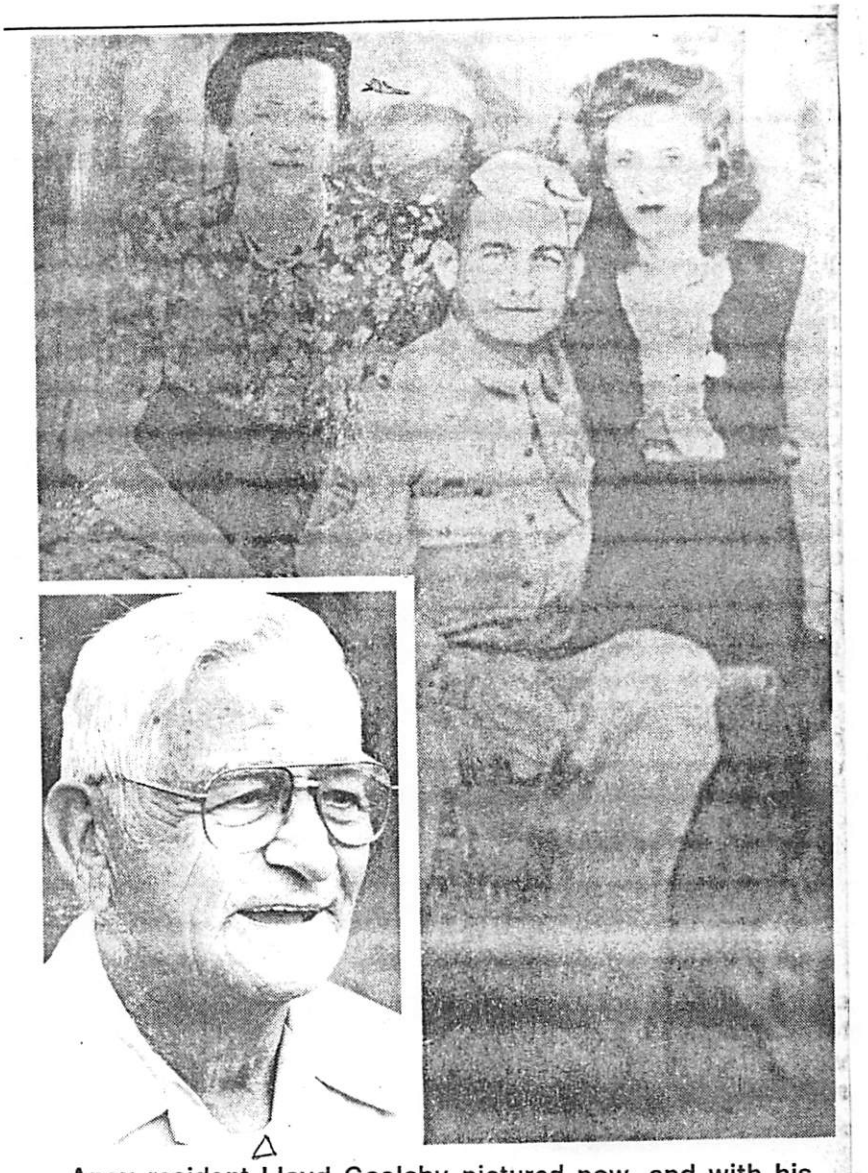
Dewey Goodwin left Apex for the Army in 1942, going with about a dozen other young men from town. However, after getting to camp, they were split up, he said.

Goodwin didn't see his Apex buddies again until after the war.

Goodwin was one of several men from Apex who fought in the Battle of the Bulge in Germany near the end of the war. Describing it as one of the bloodiest, "most cold-blooded battles" he fought in, Goodwin said almost his entire battalion was killed in combat.

A mess sergeant who served in a mobile tank battalion which moved from unit to unit, Goodwin said, "They never did give us a break." His battalion saw so much combat that Goodwin said President Harry Truman issued it a commendation, and said the outfit would not have to fight in the Pacific.

Goodwin was one of six from Apex with his family name who served in World War II. His brothers Leon and Glen also went to war, along with Donald Goodwin, Lennie Goodwin, Robert Goodwin and Wallace Goodwin.



Apex resident Lloyd Goolsby pictured now, and with his wife and mother-in-law while in the Army during World War II.

Four Maynard brothers took part in the war. John H. Maynard was in the Army engineer corps, and also fought in the Battle of the Bulge. When the war in Europe ended in 1945, Maynard was sent to the Pacific for a while. He came home to his wife on Christmas Day 1945.

John H. Maynard's brothers Durwood and Gerald also were in the Army. His brother Bob was in the Navy.

In for the duration

John O. Maynard saw 47 months of action in the Pacific during World War II. Entering the Army in 1940, Maynard was sent to Hawaii. When the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor in Dec. 1941, Maynard was 18 miles away at Schofield Barracks. Maynard said 42 planes at the harbor airfield were destroyed during the attack.

An infantryman, Maynard was later sent to New Guinea where he said the temperature soared to 135 degrees at times.

(John O. Maynard is not a relative of the other Maynard men mentioned.)

Ed Walls was injured before he left this country. While on a drill in Washington, D.C. a machine gun backfired and seriously damaged his nose.

While serving in the Philippines, Walls devised a way of beating the heat and making things better for the troops. Working at a supply depot, Walls found enough parts to build an ice machine. He then built an ice box and filled it with ice and Coca Colas for the men.

Walls also said he found flour to make biscuits with, which the soldiers enjoyed.

Walls saw three-and-a-half years of service during World War II, going from England and France to Japan and the Philippines.

Surviving a crash landing

Mayor Everette Edwards signed up for the Air Force the day after his 18th birthday. Hoping to become a fighter pilot, Edwards served as a gunner in the turret of a B-17 bomber the last year of the war.

Stationed in England, Edwards was attached to the 92nd Bomber Group. He and his fellow crew members flew 20 missions over German territory.

During his last mission, Edwards survived a crash landing. While flying over enemy-occupied Czechoslovakia, German anti-air craft artillery attacked Edwards' plane, causing it to lose its engines.

The plane crash landed into a field in France near an American military hospital.

Edwards was unhurt, and after spending a few days in France, he and the other crew members went back to their base in England.

A shrapnel-torn flight jacket of Mayor Everette Edwards is shown here along with a photo of him while with the Air Force in World War II.

The Apex men who became soldiers, sailors, and airmen in World II had good fortune for the most part. Most of them came home to their families. Yet, as in towns and cities across America, there were those who did not return. Besides the Womble men, Herbert Allen Sutton was killed at St. Lo during the Normandy invasion. Liggett Gilliam died on a B-52 bomber while saving the lives of his crew members.

The World War II legacy of Apex is one rich in valor, patriotism, and the will of young men to survive. Both those still living and those who are no longer with us are an indelible part of the town's history.

'Freedom is not free'

Sisters remember sacrifice made by brothers in war

By SANDY BARNES
Herald Editor

Sitting in her gracious living room filled with mementos, Apex native Jeanne Sutton Hack recalls her brother's death in World War II.

"It brought the war home to Apex," she says, her voice colored with nostalgia.

"Everybody knew him...Everybody was his friend," Hack said while reminiscing about Herbert Allen Sutton, her brother who died as a infantry soldier at Normandy in 1944. He was 20 years old at the time -- barely out of college.

"One of the most devastating things in Apex during the war was Herbert's death," Hack remarked.

"He died like a good soldier was supposed to," his sister said.

After being wounded on the beach at St. Lo during the second wave of the D-Day invasion, Herbert Sutton stuck his gun in the sand and dragged himself along, she related.

While struggling across the beach, the young man encountered a land mine which killed him, according to reports received by the Sutton family at the time of death.

"It changed my whole life," Hack said of her brother's death. "My mother never smiled from the time Herbert left until his body returned here."

Once Sutton was brought back and buried at Montlawn Memorial Park, Hack said her mother felt more at peace.

Before the war took her brother from her, Hack said she knew many happy times with him. "I thought he was the most wonderful thing in the work," she said of Herbert, who was five years older than she.

An expert young magician, Sutton performed for his sister and his friends in an old tent. Hack said her brother also had a movie projector on which he showed films -- for a price. "He even charged me," she said, laughing softly.

Mayor Everette Edwards was among friends to came to see Sutton's shows, said Hack.

Her brother's magician costume is still upstairs in Hack's attic.

"All your life you are affected by the loss," she said. One of the things Hack says she has missed most is not having nieces and nephews. Also, as she grows older, Hack says she seems to miss her brother more.

"People always need to remember someone died so they can live in peace," she said.

"Freedom is not free: People should know that."

Wylatta Gilliam Allen, who grew up in the green sloping lands just outside Apex, also knows the price of war. She lost her brother Liggett Gilliam in the South Pacific during World War II.

"I was in the kitchen frying chicken when Malcolm [Allen's husband] came in to tell me the news," she said. "I put down what I was doing and started to cry."

Allen, one of five children in her family, said Liggett was her youngest brother whom she used to care for.

According to news reports and letters the family received, Allen's brother, a gunner on a B-24 bomber, died a hero's death in New Britain. Twenty-three year old Gilliam saved the lives of his crew members by sacrificing his life during combat in the South Pacific.

A letter which the family received after Gilliam's death said: "Although the restrictions of censorship deny the privilege of stating exactly what occurred, we can say that Liggett, at the cost of his own life, was instrumental in saving the lives of seven other members of his crew."

The letter continued, "Liggett was a great guy and if every man had the devotion to duty that he had this war would be over in no time at all."

Gilliam was posthumously awarded the Purple Heart, the Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters, the President's Citation and the Citation of Honor for meritorious achievement while on flight missions.

Liggett Gilliam, who had gone overseas in October 1943, was killed in March 1944. His daughter Liggette was born shortly after her father's death.

Besides Wylatta Allen, Gilliam has a brother, Nevin B. Gilliam and a sister, Dolores Williams who live in Apex.

The reason I asked is that there are definitely older people still around who remember Mack Upchurch--and perhaps they'd know Tula's family as well. Emma Council grew up on Mack Upchurch's tobacco farm and she has lots of good stories about him. Her father was a sharecropper. She also worked as a housekeeper for several families on Salem Street so it's even possible she worked for Tula and Dessie or knows someone who did. Her number is 557-5965.

We talked about the talk I gave in Apex on 12 MAY 2009. She was very impressed and encouraged me to come back and tell more stories. She is not related to Bill Sutton who is on the Apex Town Board

Her GF came to Apex in 1914 - Joseph Richard Sutton. He bought land and a home from a Dr Rogers who owned a huge amount of land locally. Dr Rogers had willed the home to his son in 1835. Jeane says she was taught to spell her name JEAN but when she went to get married he birth certificate showed JEANE so she used the spelling with an "e". Her mother was nee HERBERT GRIMES but she went by BERT (Grimes) Sutton and her legal papers show her as "Bert". Her father Allen P. Sutton was a mail carrier in the Apex area

'Freedom is not free'

Sisters remember sacrifice made by brothers in war

By SANDY BARNES
Herald Editor

Sitting in her gracious living room filled with mementos, Apex native Jeanne Sutton Hack recalls her brother's death in World War II.

"It brought the war home to Apex," she says, her voice colored with nostalgia.

"Everybody knew him...Everybody was his friend," Hack said while reminiscing about Herbert Allen Sutton, her brother who died as a infantry soldier at Normandy in 1944. He was 20 years old at the time -- barely out of college.

"One of the most devastating things in Apex during the war was Herbert's death," Hack remarked.

"He died like a good soldier was supposed to," his sister said.

After being wounded on the beach at St. Lo during the second wave of the D-Day invasion, Herbert Sutton stuck his gun in the sand and dragged himself along, she related.

While struggling across the beach, the young man encountered a land mine which killed him, according to reports received by the Sutton family at the time of death.

"It changed my whole life," Hack said of her brother's death. "My mother never smiled from the time Herbert left until his body returned here."

Once Sutton was brought back and buried at Montlawn Memorial Park, Hack said her mother felt more at peace.

Before the war took her brother from her, Hack said she knew many happy times with him. "I thought he was the most wonderful thing in the work," she said of Herbert, who was five years older than she.

An expert young magician, Sutton performed for his sister and his friends in an old tent. Hack said her brother also had a movie projector on which he showed films -- for a price. "He even charged me," she said, laughing softly.

Mayor Everette Edwards was among friends to came to see Sutton's shows, said Hack.

Her brother's magician costume is still upstairs in Hack's attic.

"All your life you are affected by the loss," she said. One of the things Hack says she has missed most is not having nieces and nephews. Also, as she grows older, Hack says she seems to miss her brother more.

"People always need to remember someone died so they can live in peace," she said.

"Freedom is not free: People should know that."

KILLED IN ACTION 1944

Staff Sgt. Liggett N. Gilliam, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Gilliam of Apex, was killed in action on Cape Gloucester, New Britain Island, March 1, the War Department has advised his parents. A gunner and engineer on a Liberator bomber, he had been in New Guinea since last October. Surviving are his parents; his wife, the former Essie Ruth Rowland of Fuquay Springs; two brothers, Myers C. and Nevin B. Gilliam of Apex and two sisters, Mrs. S. W. Wylatta Gilliam Allen, who grew up in the green sloping lands just outside Apex, also knows the price of war. She lost her brother Liggett Gilliam in the South Pacific during World War II.

"I was in the kitchen frying chicken when Malcolm [Allen's husband] came in to tell me the news," she said. "I put down what I was doing and started to cry."

Allen, one of five children in her family, said Liggett was her youngest brother whom she used to care for.

According to news reports and letters the family received, Allen's brother, a gunner on a B-24 bomber, died a hero's death in New Britain. Twenty-three year old Gilliam saved the lives of his crew members by sacrificing his life during combat in the South Pacific.

A letter which the family received after Gilliam's death said: "Although the restrictions of censorship deny the privilege of stating exactly what occurred, we can say that Liggett, at the cost of his own life, was instrumental in saving the lives of seven other members of his crew."

The letter continued, "Liggett was a great guy and if every man had the devotion to duty that he had this war would be over in no time at all."

Gilliam was posthumously awarded the Purple Heart, the Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters, the President's Citation and the Citation of Honor for meritorious achievement while on flight missions.

Liggett Gilliam, who had gone overseas in October 1943, was killed in March 1944. His daughter Liggette was born shortly after her father's death.

Besides Wylatta Allen, Gilliam has a brother, Nevin B. Gilliam and a sister, Dolores Williams who live in Apex.
