Class of '60 holds reunion

By Jayne Howell Smallwood

The Apex High School class of 1960 celebrated with a class reunion held at the C.C. Jones Community Building in Apex on April 29, 1995. This was the first reunion ever held by the class. There were 66 in attendance. Out of a class roll of 57, there were 35 class members present.

The social hour was followed by a buffet dinner and program. The invocation was given by Rev. Bob Langston, a local minister and member of the class. Reverend Langston also paid tribute to two classmates, Gerald Morgan and Jacob Stroup, and also several faculty members who are now deceased.

Following the dinner, Dr. Sandra Sessoms, also a member of the class, spoke on major national and international events which have occurred over the last 35 years.

Carolyn Ferrell led an interesting and entertaining segment of the program which high-lighted some of the classmates' high school activities. She concluded this time with some current information about classmates and their families.

The class colors of black and gold were used throughout the decorating theme and also with the printed materials. The tables, covered with white linen table cloths, were each appointed with yellow chrysanthemums, the class flower. Crystal candlesticks held black candles and were tied with black and gold ribbons. Each classmate present received a booklet of brief biographical sketches and a directory.

Class mascot, Cathie Woodell Pendergraft, was present along with two former teachers: Mildred Cooke and Frances Chappell.

The committee members spent a year in preparation for the event. Those participating were as follows: Jayne Howell Smallwood, General Chairperson; Rita Atkins Sears and Marie Lewter Holt, correspondence; Marion Hobby Smith, reservations and treasurer; Brenda Ragan Jones and Judy Horton Phillips, memorabilia and music; Shirley Goodwin Upchurch, decorations; Carolyn Ferrell, name tags; Bobby Duke, Durwood Stephens and Jim Smallwood; building set-up.

Woodell, Young united in

Christina J. Woodell and Paul R. Young, III were united in marriage at the Apex United Methodist Church on Saturday, February 14 at 5 p.m. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Jack M. Benfield.

Musicians were Mrs. Carolyn Shuldt, soloist, Mrs. Laurin Threatt, organist and Mr. Jack Thift, guitarist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack S. Woodell of Apex. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. Young, Jr. of Cary.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white crystal organza over satinette. Silk venise lace and beading adorned the long tapered sleeves extending from the pouffed shirred shoulders. The fitted basque bodice was styled with a Queen Anne neckline encrusted with delicate beading and silk venise lace. Covered buttons extended down the back of the sheer yoke to a deep V below the waist. A scalloped silk venise lace chain and motifs highlighted the softly gathered, full skirt and cathedral train.

The maid of honor was Teresa Sorrell, friend of the bride. Bridesmaids were Karen Hill and Laureen Young. Honorary bridesmaids were Cynthia Lovic, Cathie Pendergraft, Carol Stephenson and Connie Woodell.

The best man was Jay Long, friend of the groom. Ushers were Joseph Woodell and Gary Young.

Presiding at the guest registry were Mr. and Mrs. Tim Campbell. Mrs. Barbara Duke directed the wedding.

Following the reception, the couple left for a wedding trip to North Myrtle Beach. They will live in Cary.

The bride attends Wake Technical College and is employed with SAS Institute as a co-op student. The groom is a graduate of Wake Technical College and is employed with Southern Data Systems as a Computer Technician.

Mrs. Paul R. Young, III

The bride's father is a security supervisor with Rex Hospital and her mother is a pharmacist assistant with Medical Center Pharmacy in Apex.

The groom's father is staff engineer with IBM and his mother is an accountant with Compucolor Color in Cary.

A PEX Farmer a Natural at produce

By DAVID LEONE
Staff Writer

It's late afternoon on a Friday, the sun is out and it is early enough in the year that it hasn't become sticky with humidity.

A warm breeze is blowing — it is that breeze that is just enough to keep the farmer selling his produce streetside from breaking sweat.

That is good, because if there's one thing Joe Woodell does a lot of — it's sweat.

"I am a farmer," Joe says, with obvious pride.

Joe was born and reared on a tobacco farm just south of town. Though he left town for awhile like many youngsters are apt to do, Joe found his fortune in the very earth his grandfather had toiled over for years.

"There's nothing more satisfying than seeing a crop from seed to harvest and when you can eat what you produce," Joe says.

His main crop is tomatoes. Joe grows them in two greenhouses he built on the land belonging to his grandmother behind his home on Tingen Road.

He also has a greenhouse for cucumbers and grows corn, snap beans, squash, peas, okra, watermelons and other produce.

The tomatoes are a relatively new venture for Joe. This is his fifth crop since he first planted — and Joe says he's learned a lot since he began.

"I had a friend who grew up two blocks away who began his commercial greenhouse tomato operation in 1976," Joe says. "I helped him build his first commercial greenhouse."

That friend was David Denson, who has been a mentor to Joe over the years.

Joe's greatest help has come in the form of his "partner in life," Marilyn Langdon.

"I couldn't do it without her," he says. "On days when I'm running behind and I'm totally confused, Marilyn is always there to smooth things out," he reflects.

RIPE FOR PICKIN'—Apex tomato grower Joe Woodell pauses to inspect the fruit as he makes his way down the rows of tomato plants in one of the greenhouses on his farm on Tingen Road. (Herald photo by David Leone)

Help also comes in the form of his nephew, Jason.

Though Jason works hard in the garden and doing other chores, he says he enjoys the work.

"It's fun," Jason says, "I like selling tomatoes at the market — I can sell tomatoes for a living."

"He is my best salesman," Joe admits, "He is very conscientious, very polite with all the customers and a quick learner — he's even taught me a few things about the art of selling produce."

Since he began growing tomatoes, Joe says "I have experienced bacterial problems and nematoad problems."

He describes nematoads as ground dwelling organisms that attack the roots of the tomato plants.

Instead of mounting a chemical search and destroy mission to rid himself of the nematoads, Joe found a natural way to rid himself of the pests.

Instead, he saturated the soil with crabmeal (crushed and dehydrated crab waste from crab meat processing plants). The chitins that exist naturally in the soil consume the crabmeat, causing their population to thrive. After a while, the nematoad young get eaten up by the massive amounts of chitins in the soil.

Joe attributes his use of nature as a combatant to his grandfather.

"Grandad was definitely a conservationist," he says. "He was very aware of how nature interacts both positively and negatively in regards to crop production."

"He was a good steward of his land in that he used the least amount of chemicals and fertilizers as possible long before it was a popular idea," Joe says.

The first crop Joe attempted was mostly a bust due to his building the greenhouses on top of a field suffering from Granville (bacterial) wilt — which had taken out his grandfather's tobacco long ago.

"It was a costly loss of memory," he says.

After superheating the soil through solarization, though, Joe replanted in the same spot.

Now, that same land is producing healthy fruit.

"I enjoy farming because you get to see the fruits of your labor," Joe says, adding "And your vacation time and weekends are humped together in 2 1/2 months."

For Joe, tomato production season lasts from October until July — and during that time he works like a dog.

"I start work before the sun comes up and I quit work when it becomes too dark to see," he says.

"When you're a farmer you make every use of the sunlight and you always wish you had more," he says.

During tomato season, Joe doesn't take any days off and rarely takes a break — even for interviews.

Though Joe doesn't sell his crops from his farm, Joe does take the time to set up shop on Salem Street, and at the Fuquay-Varina and Cary farmer's markets though.

"To sell my first year's product I had to find a location with ample foot traffic and I chose the Cary area because of the size of the parking lot of Ashworth Village," he says.

So he drummed up support from the town and area producers and got a farmer's market going.

Joe is also the current market manager in Fuquay-Varina and the president of the North Carolina Growers Association.

He doesn't participate in the Apex farmer's market because of the time conflict with Cary, where he has a strong customer base.

He does sell tomatoes on Fridays at a stand in front of the Medical Center Pharmacy from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. at Salem and East Moore.

The pharmacy is a special place for Joe, because his mother, Judy, has worked there for 28 years.

Joe remembers visiting his mother and owner Lelon Dollar in his youth.

"I used to come up here after school every day when they had the soda fountain in the back and keep the candy counter straight," Joe says.

"He helps our business," says Lelon Dollar.

"They see all the cars stopping and they see our drugstore," he adds, "It's really good advertising for us."

Judy Woodell says that all her children are industrious from the work they did on the farm.

"[The farm life] provided a good foundation, honesty, integrity and hard work," she says.

"I learned that there's nothing wrong with hard work," Joe says, "It keeps you healthy both in mind and body and helps you appreciate a lot of what others take for granted."

"If I have my way I'll be able to maintain my grandfather's land as a farm for as long as I live if the family wishes to do so," Joe says between picking tomatoes off the plants in the greenhouse.

"The family consensus is we have no desire to sell the farm," he says, knowing full well the value of the land with its proximity to Research Triangle Park.

"The heritage that goes along with [the farm] is more valuable than any amount of money a developer could offer," he adds.

"I hate seeing Apex become another suburb of the capital and Research Triangle and I hope everyone soon realizes there is a finite amount of space on this earth and that open space and greenway is essential to human health."

"Many people forget that in past years everyone farmed to some extent for survival," he says. "I'd personally rather depend on myself for life's nourishment."

"I'm sure that any of my beliefs stem from the lessons I learned working on the farm from the summers of my youth," Joe says. "I'd like to think I'm a good steward of the land myself."

On pages 269 & 270 the Author describes the antebellum situation with regards to Raleigh merchants. In 1851 owners were concerned with being open too long - from sunrise until dark 5-7 in summer - a 14 hour day. The 1851 movement came to naught. In 1858 the merchants were concerned about the practice of extending 12 months credit. These interests did not lead to a formal merchants association until years later. Those signing a document in January 1858 re representation at a Commercial Convention in Richmond are listed below.
